Cut a beef kidney into slices, season highly with pepper and salt and fry to a light brown. Pour a little warm water into the pan, with flour enough to thicken to paste, and let it stew very gently for one-half hour.

A cook who always has the most delicious broiled and fried ham to be found anywhere seeks her ham for an hour or two in molasses and water before she cooks it. She uses about a tablespoonful of molasses to a cupful of water. The meat is well dried before it is cooked.

Molders Strengthen Union.

With the view of further strengthening the International Molders' union, the organization has adopted considerable constructive legislation and has made some radical changes in its constitution. Chief among these is the increase in the fees from 25 to 45 cents per week. By this means an addition to the strike fund, which will amount to over 200 per cent, will be made. While thus clearing the decks for action in the event of strikes, the association has gone on record as favoring conciliation and conferences between employer and employee.

Ladies For the Union Label.

Union labels on pocketbook wallets, garters and every other article that women wear are the dictate of the delegates of the International Women's Union Label league. Every article that woman wears, from the toe of her openwork stocking to the comb in her marcelled hair, must bear the insignia of union labor.

MRS. KNIGHT A CENTURY OLD

Newbury Woman Has a Red Letter Day

BRIGHT AND CHEERFUL

On Her Hundredth Anniversary—Recalls Visit of General Lafayette, the French Patriot, in 1824.

Newbury, Jan. 13.—Saturday was a red-letter day in the life history of Mrs. Eleanor Cochrane Knight of this place. It was her 102d birthday and during the afternoon quite a number of neighbors and friends called upon her to extend congratulations to one of the oldest women in Vermont. They found her in comparatively good health, retaining her faculties to a remarkable degree and full of reminiscences reaching back over 80 years of the last century.

Mrs. Knight was born of a long-lived family, many of her ancestors living beyond fourscore years, but none of them reaching the century mark. Her mother-in-law, however, Mrs. Jonathan Knight of Westmoreland, was six months older when she died than Mrs. Knight is today. She died at her son's home in Piermont, N. H., over 40 years ago, and was smart enough to actually make and fit a dress for herself when she was 100 years old.

Mrs. Knight came of Scotch-Irish stock and her great-grandparents, John Cochran and Mary, came to America in 1718 and settled in Brunswick, Me. The fear of the Indians compelled them to migrate and they moved to Londonderry, N. H., where the youngest son, Samuel, was born. John, son of Samuel, married Agnes Wilson, who was a sister of James Wilson, who made the first shingles in America, and also a sister of David Wilson. Both the brothers settled and died in Bradford, Vt., both living to be over 80 years old.

John and Agnes Cochran came to Bradford in 1802 and Mrs. Knight, their sixth child and second daughter, was born Jan. 11, 1808, in a house that stood near the cemetery on the upper plain in that town. In 1812 her parents moved to this town and lived for many years in a house which has long since been gone and the highway leading to it abandoned.

Mrs. Knight has resided on the edge of the village for many years, and her recollections of the old times are always interesting. In the great storm of 1834, on May 15, she was taking care of a sick woman, and her father came for her in a sleigh. They were obliged to abandon the sleigh and ride home in the night on horseback. By the next morning three feet of snow had fallen. Wages were low in those olden times, and Mrs. Knight used to do housework when a girl for 50 cents a week. Later she learned the tailoring trade, and went to Boston, where she received the munificent sum of $1.25 a week and her board for her work. She made the journey from her Vermont home to Boston in a stage in about two days.

The first time Mrs. Knight ever ate tomatoes is associated with an event which will be clear in her memory always. This was at a dinner given to General Lafayette by General Henry Dearborn in Boston on the occasion of his visit to this country.

At that time Mrs. Knight met the distinguished French patriot.

Mrs. Knight was married to Simon Avery of this town, Feb. 24, 1846. He died in 1888 and a year later she married Josiah Knight. From that time until his death in 1898 she lived at Charles City, Vt., and was transferred to the Newbury church in 1890. Since she met with a fall a few years ago, she has been unable to go to church.

The Proper Food for Poultry.

Opinions differ widely as to what is the proper grain ration for poultry. Almost every poultryman has his own ideas on the subject; but, no matter what is used, it is universally conceded that some meat or animal food should be given in connection therewith. What C. S. Carr of Bogue, Mass., thinks on the subject is expressed in the following letter from him: "I think 'Page's Perfected Poultry Food' ought to be kept by the hens all of the time in the winter with other foods, such as cracked corn, oats and wheat."

"Any one sending his address on a postal card to C. S. Page, Hyde Park, Vt., and mentioning this paper, will receive by mail, free, postpaid, a sample package of 'Page's Perfected Poultry Food.'"

Getting Together.

It appears to be coming rapidly recognized that labor organizations as a whole are beneficial to the organizations as well as to the industries of the United States, and the workers as well as the employers are getting closer together as time passes. In the last twelve months, through the co-operation of the man who wishes to buy labor and the man who has labor to sell, the pay of the workman has in a number of instances increased more than 15 per cent.

THE TASK OF LABOR.

It Must Lift the Burden of Toil From Women and Children.

"Hail to Labor" was the theme of Rev. M. P. Boynton's sermon at the Lexington Avenue Baptist church, Chicago, on Labor Sunday.

"The church hails labor in her vision. The better condition, the shorter day, the increased wage, the fuller life, all these are parts of that vision that ought to be quickly realized. The churches must share in the high hopes of labor."

"Then, again, we hail labor in her victories. Wonderfully has labor wrought. Mighty have been her victories. We rejoice at the relief that has been so dearly bought. And of course we know that these victories would have been impossible without the labor unions. These organizations have marched like the companies of a great army and have fought for noble prizes, many of which they now possess."

"I do not know the merits of the present great strike, but I admire the bond of sympathy that binds those men and women together to such an extent that from New York to Los Angeles they make common cause for benefits and rights that they believe are their just due. Whether they win or lose they have won on the field of brotherhood a deeper and richer fellowship and are the stronger for the next struggle, whatever and whenever that may be."

"Only as labor unites and works together can there be the greatest progress and the swift bettering of conditions from which so many suffer today."

"Labor must lift the burden of labor from the weak shoulders of women. Labor must release the child from the factory and the store. Labor must shorten and sweeten the day of toil. Labor must increase the wage and add joys to life. This is the task of labor. Then let all laboring men and women unite under wise leaders. Let them go forth pledged in the vows of an unselfish brotherhood to make the world better. Be sure of justice. Keep your hands clean, your hopes high and your faith in the good God of the Christian."

"This I say—if I were a wage earner I would join the union of my craft."

A PROGRESSIVE UNION.

President of the Printers Outlines a Plan of Work.

James M. Lynch, president of the International Typographical union, in a recent article said:

"As compared with four years ago I believe that the condition of organized labor has been much improved. And the condition of organized labor four years ago as compared with that four years previously will also show wonderful improvement. Four years ago the members of the International Typographical union working at the book and job branch of the trade were laboring nine hours per day, fifty-four hours per week. Today these members are working not more than eight hours per day, or forty-eight hours per week. Wages in our trade during the past four years have been materially advanced, the total increase representing millions of dollars. We find that wherever the eight hour day has been in effect for a year or more wage increases are forthcoming and with comparatively little friction. As a general proposition, of course, wages have not increased in proportion with the upward trend in the cost of living. The advance in the cost of living has been by leaps and bounds, but through the trades union movement we have at least been able to lessen the burden of that increased cost to our members. It is the unorganized wage earner who is suffering because of the unprecedented increase in the necessities of life. His wages remain stationary."

"As to the future, a vast amount of work requires attention. We still stand for the complete attainment of all of the reforms advocated by the labor movement."

"We must continue to agitate for free schools, free text books and compulsory education and the abolition of all forms of involuntary servitude except punishment for crime. We oppose the abuse of the injunction process. We demand a universal workday of not more than eight hours, six days to constitute a week's work; nationalization of the telegraph and telephone lines; the passage of anti child labor laws in states where they do not now exist and their right enforcement in states where they are on the statute books. In short, labor's programme is comprehensive and is inherently right."

"The International Typographical union will continue to press, and even more forcefully, for improved sanitary conditions in composing rooms. We are enlisted in the war against tuberculosis. The great white plague has been allowed free rein in our craft. We propose to curb the disease and as nearly as may be possible stamp it out."

"We also have under consideration certain benefit features that will greatly strengthen our union because they are just and humanitarian. The first of these, an old age pension scheme, will shortly go to a referendum vote."

"We believe that wages and hours, important as they are to our material welfare, are not the only subjects in the ken of trades union action, and we intend to consider and eventually make effective measures that will make for the greater comfort and happiness of our membership."

"In short, we intend to be a most pronounced factor in the development of society along correct lines."
